

University of Manchester / Healthwork Asbestos and Lead Training Course

25th September 2017

This new and exciting one day course is designed for occupational health doctors, occupational health nurses, GPs and health and safety professionals. The course has been developed in a collaboration between the University of Manchester Centre for Occupational and Environmental Health (COEH) and Healthwork.

The emphasis will be on medical aspects of asbestos and lead exposures and health surveillance in line with The Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations and the Lead at Work Regulations.

Our expert educators will include an occupational hygienist, occupational physicians, HSE appointed doctors and physicians who have worked at and advised the HSE on asbestos and lead health effects and health surveillance.

This course is designed to be practical in nature and will feature small group work and workshop sessions. The course will feature:

- Regulatory factors
- Occupational hygiene and risk control
- Health surveillance and HSE appointed doctor work
- Practical worked examples

Is the course for me?

Everyone is welcome to attend. The course is primarily designed for occupational health doctors, occupational health nurses, GPs and health and safety professionals. Doctors who are appointed by the HSE or who wish to become appointed will find the course particularly helpful.

What's the Price?

£350 per person (to include access to all course material, certificate, CPD points, lunch and refreshments).

Where is the Course?

Midland Hotel, Central Manchester

How do I book?

To book please visit
<https://www.bmh.manchester.ac.uk/study/cpd/courses/asbestos-lead-occupational-health-cpd/> or call Kadie Mannion on 0161 831 9701 for more information.