Are you dreaming of something better?

Do you want to work for a company that does more?

- More to invest in your talent?
- More to help you thrive?
- More to support your development and progression?
- More to look after your wellbeing?
- More to help you do the job you trained for?

Then you've just met your perfect fit!

Here at Medigold Health, we believe great occupational health changes lives... not just for the people you support, but for the organisations you guide. If you're someone who values doing work that matters and guiding clients through the ups and downs of workplace health, and bringing clarity to complex situations, you will feel right at home with us!

You'll be joining a team where your clinical judgement makes a noticeable difference to how organisations look after their people. One moment you may be offering calm, practical advice to a client navigating a difficult sickness absence case, and the next you could be advising pension trustees reviewing a complex ill health retirement claim, or supporting the implementation of a company health surveillance programme. Your work helps people find a way forward and gives employers the direction and reassurance they need.

You will have the backing of and support from friendly, highly skilled colleagues and leading-edge technology that reduces admin tasks and makes your working day smoother, not harder. Most importantly, you will be trusted to deliver the kind of thoughtful, consistent and compassionate occupational health that we pride ourselves on, within a strong clinical governance framework.

This is a great opportunity to make a meaningful impact while growing your career in a business that values clinical excellence and human connection in equal measure.

- Managing a range of cases including fitness for work, workplace adjustments, return-to-work, and health surveillance.

- Liaising with our clients and other healthcare professionals to support employee health and wellbeing within the organisation.
- Ensuring the provision of occupational health services to Medigold clients and their employees is of the highest standard at all times.

- Good understanding of relevant workplace health and safety legislation, employment law and guidelines.
