Full time

Southeast England

Join us:

At GSK we aspire to recruit and retain the best people to do their best work in the best place. We are dedicated to improve the quality of human life by enabling patients/consumers to do more, feel better and live longer; this includes our employees who are committed to making GSK a world-leading pharmaceutical company.

This visionary approach is shared by Occupational Health service, which looks beyond the traditional areas of compliance, fitness and capability and to develop and implement new initiatives that promote the health and wellbeing of all GSK employees across the globe.

This is a unique opportunity to train within an in-house service. You'll take part in a diverse group of cutting edge programmes, as well as traditional Occupational Health activities. You will also help to shape GSK's future through collaboration with our business partners.

In return you will receive an attractive salary plus a competitive benefits package, including pension, bonus, share incentives and a healthcare plan. Professional expenses will also be reimbursed and all costs related to training will be supported.

We are open with location of this role.
