Certificate in OH Case Management

This practical three-day course, organised by The At Work Partnership with the support of Brunel University London, is designed to develop an understanding of case management* concepts to improve the OH management of disability, absence and return-to-work. The course is structured around the biopsychosocial model of workplace health and disability and the 'flags' framework for identifying obstacles to job retention or return-to-work. It examines how the adoption of a five steps approach to case management, with a focus on assessing an individual's health and workplace needs and developing cost-effective plans, can improve return-to-work and job retention outcomes.

The course brings together some of the top experts in their fields, including Professor Kim Burton, one of the founders of the biopsychosocial and 'flags' approach. The course director, leading OH physician, Dr Nerys Williams, and course deviser, Occupational Health [at Work] editor Dr John Ballard, ensure that the course is pitched at the right level to appeal to experienced occupational physicians, OH nurses and other specialists.

The outstanding subject knowledge and accessible presentations of the lecturing team will ensure that you come away with a detailed knowledge and understanding of the case management skills that OH professionals need in practice. The course lectures are supplemented by some group work to further develop key skills.

* The course adopts the definition of case management from the Case Management Society UK (as adapted). This defines case management as "a collaborative process which assesses, plans, implements, co-ordinates, monitors and evaluates the options and services required to meet an individual's health care and employment needs, using communication and available resources to promote quality cost-effective outcomes."

Who is the course designed for?

- Occupational physicians
- OH nurses
- Case managers
- Other professionals whose roles encompass case management

Delegates at Certificate in OH Case Management courses commented:

"A really well structured programme, delivered by real experts and skilled teachers"
Dr Dick Hooper, Global Health Advisor, International SOS

"Excellent. It brings alive the principles of the biopsychosocial model and provides practitioners with the tools to be competent case managers"
Joan Scott, Employee Health & Wellbeing Service Manager, University Hospital South Manchester

"The power and benefits of case management in a nutshell"
Rosie Rutledge, Advanced Practitioner OT, Belfast HSC Trust

How will gaining this qualification benefit you and your organisation?

You will gain:

- A comprehensive understanding of the importance of the role that OH can play as case management coordinator
- A detailed knowledge of the biopsychosocial model and how it can be used to identify obstacles to job retention or return-to-work
- A structured approach to case management, from drawing up return-to-work and job-retention plans, to putting these into practice and evaluating their success
- In-depth comprehension of the theory and practical skills required to manage complex cases, from chronic conditions to mental health
- Guidance on legal obligations

This course will equip you with the theory and practice to improve your case management skills – helping your organisation to reduce the burden of long-term absence by improving return-to-work and job-retention outcomes.

Assignment and certification

In order to qualify for the Certificate in OH Case Management, delegates must attend at least 80% of the course. Following the course, students will undertake an assignment demonstrating their understanding of the theory and skills taught in the course. Students who successfully complete the assignment will be awarded The At Work Partnership's Certificate in OH Case Management.
